Tackling IRS Tax Problems as a New Year's Resolution Happens Faster with Expert Help

Tax Resolution Services, Co., CEO encourages delinquent taxpayers to make their IRS tax problem resolution intentions a reality this new year

Encino, CA—Top New Year's resolutions include things like spending more time with family and friends, losing weight, quitting smoking and getting out of debt. For millions of Americans, the "get out of debt resolution" means resolving tax debt – which could include addressing things like unfiled and unpaid back taxes, liens, levies/garnishments, overdue payroll taxes or claiming offshore bank accounts. New Year's resolutions can help bring intentions top of mind, but like any intention, execution is key as is taking the next right step on the road to rehabilitation.

"So many Americans make clearing up their tax problems their New Year's resolution, then get frustrated a few weeks into January because they haven't made progress," says Michael Rozbruch, founder and CEO of Tax Resolution Services, Co. (TRS) whose firm helps clients resolve tax problems. "What the tax troubled public doesn't realize is that getting tax help is an action that needs to be coupled with having an expert on your side. Taking on the IRS seems overwhelming but it doesn't have to be. A simple first step, like getting a free consult from a certified tax resolution specialist, can make the difference between night and day." It can also reduce your stress level.

In his 14 years of helping Americans get tax relief, Rozbruch says most taxpayers wind up becoming tax delinquent through no fault of their own. Once behind, they often succumb to procrastination and an inability to take care of their tax liabilities. "There are many reasons why someone gets behind in their tax responsibilities like major negative life altering events such as job, home or business loss, illness or death of a loved one, alcoholism, addiction and even gambling. The poor economic conditions that have persisted for the last 4 years haven't helped either", says Rozbruch. "In its wake are delinquent taxpayers who are too afraid to come forward with their IRS tax issues, but are making this financially stressful situation worse by not dealing with it. New Years resolutions are only meaningful if there are actionable next steps, one step at a time. The best success step I recommend to get the roadmap to recovery paved is to reach out to a expert tax resolution specialist."

Tax problem resolution firms specialize in assisting getting clients in current compliance (all returns filed) and negotiating with the IRS on the amounts owing. Once retained, they take over all communications with the IRS on a taxpayer's behalf and can get taxpayers out from behind the shadows and successfully help them on the road to recovery. "I encourage any delinquent taxpayers to make 2012 their year to get their IRS stress off their dining room table and into the offices of professionals. Never tackle big tax stress alone – always get experts on your side." Says Rozbruch.
